How AquaSplit Works

AquaSplit uses a precisely arranged array of permanent neodymium magnets to restructure water molecules as they flow through the inline device. The magnetic field breaks mineral clusters into smaller, more bioavailable particles and entrains a permanent negative charge into the water — replicating the properties of pristine, naturally flowing water.

This process is entirely mechanical: no electricity, no chemicals, no filters to replace. Water simply flows through the unit under existing system pressure, and exits restructured and energised. The effect is permanent — structured water retains its negative charge indefinitely, unlike mechanical vortex devices whose effect dissipates within 60 hours.
